Entrepreneurial Failure: distinct perceptions among entrepreneurs and entrepreneurship supporters

Nazanin Eftekhar

Aalborg University

There are different definitions for entrepreneurial failure in the literature, yet we know little about the concept specifically from the involved people in entrepreneurship. This research stems from the results of a qualitative study conducted in 2015. From an empirical point of view, a new qualitative research, rooted in the social construction of entrepreneurship failure has been developed. Interviews with people involved in entrepreneurship including entrepreneurs and consultants who support start-ups have been conducted in order to identify similarities and differences in their perspectives of entrepreneurial Failure concept. This research is in the process of analysis of data.